At Simon Fraser University, we know a thing or two about turning big ideas into bold success stories. Dubbed the “instant university” when we opened our doors in 1965, SFU is now one of Canada’s leading comprehensive universities, widely recognized for its student-centred, research-driven and community-engaged approach to higher learning.

SFU is proud to be an integral part of the unique educational collaboration represented by the Centre for Digital Media and the Master of Digital Media program. When the new centre opens its doors in 2012, it will welcome more than 100 of the best minds in digital design and media—five times the size of the inaugural cohort in 2007. As part of this highly creative academic family, you can be confident of your future as a leader in the rapidly growing digital media community.

Yours sincerely,

Andrew Petter
President and Vice-Chancellor
